PRECIOUS METALS COMMENTARY

Gold prices are moderately lower and trading just under the psychologically important $1,300.00 level in early-afternoon U.S. trading Tuesday. Gold and silver markets did not react significantly to the concluded U.S.-North Korea summit earlier today. August Comex gold futures were last down $2.40 an ounce at $1,300.80. July Comex silver was last down $0.022 at $16.93 an ounce.

The world marketplace took in stride the apparent positive conclusion of the summit meeting on denuclearization between U.S. President Donald Trump and North Korean President Kim Jong Un. World stock markets were narrowly mixed after the meeting.

U.S. Treasuries and the world currency markets also showed muted reactions to the summit's conclusion—probably because traders and investors realize there are going to be lots of twists and turns on the road to complete denuclearization of North Korea, but still reckon this is a good start.

On tap earlier today was the U.S. consumer price index (CPI) for May. CPI came in at up 0.2% from April and up 2.8%, year-on-year. Those numbers were in line with market expectations and had little impact on the markets.

Attention now turns to the Federal Reserve's Open Market Committee (FOMC) meeting that began today and ends Wednesday afternoon with a statement. It is widely expected the FOMC will raise U.S. interest rates by 0.25% at this meeting. Fed Chair Jerome Powell will have a press conference following the meeting.

The European Central Bank also holds its monetary policy meeting on Thursday. No change is expected in ECB policy, but the central bank is still on a path of easy money that is keeping its interest rates very low, and diverging with those of the U.S. By the end of the year the spread between key U.S. and Euro zone interest rates is expected to be around 3.0%.

The key "outside markets" today find Nymex crude oil prices slightly higher and trading right around $66.50 a barrel. The U.S. dollar index is near steady today. Source: Kitco
