PRECIOUS METALS COMMENTARY

Gold and silver prices are solidly lower and trading near their daily lows in early-afternoon U.S. trading Monday. Gold hit a 12-month low and silver futures hit a seven-month low. A higher U.S. dollar index is a negative for the precious metals to start the trading week. August gold futures were last down $10.00 an ounce at $1,244.40. September Comex silver was last down $0.303 at $15.895 an ounce.

World stock markets were mostly lower Monday, including U.S. stock indexes. While world trade tensions remain high, which is causing some anxiety in the market place, the gold and silver markets would rather act like raw commodities than safe-haven assets. Much of the raw commodity sector has been pressured in recent weeks by worries the trade disputes among the major economies of the world will curtail demand for many commodities.

U.S. President Trump is now focusing on auto imports into the U.S. for tariffs. The already-tense trade relations between the U.S. and the other major economies of the world appear to have ratcheted up another notch early this week. It could be a quieter trading week this week, as Canadian markets are closed today for Canada Day and the U.S. Independence Day holiday is on Wednesday. However, some important U.S. economic data is out later this week, including the Fed's FOMC minutes on Thursday and the jobs report on Friday. The other key "outside market" today finds Nymex crude oil prices are modestly lower and trading just below $74.00/bbl. Source: Kitco
